This course explores how and why the products of creative action are socially constructed as Art. We will consider how people organize themselves socially in order to understand and communicate their beliefs about the aesthetic status and characteristics of particular disciplines and works of art, and how the social uses to which arts works are employed underwrite the social, political, economic and cultural value of Art.

This is a reading course. In addition to giving students an in-depth introduction to scholarly debates and research about the relation between Art and social organization, the course also focuses on developing student skills in reading, summary and synthesis of complex, advanced ideas and scholarship, and application of those ideas to professional practice. These skills are essential to developing arts leadership.

Course Requirements:

1. Attend class. Participate actively in class. Read carefully and discuss thoughtfully all assigned materials.
2. Complete a journal entry for each week's reading. Journal entries should consist of: 1) a summary sentence for each chapter of the book assigned; and 2) one paragraph that summarizes the book's argument, method and conclusions. Journal entries must be submitted in print (i.e. not via email) at the beginning of each class session.
3. Compose two discussion questions related to each week's reading. Discussion questions must be submitted in print (i.e. not via email) at the beginning of each class session.
4. Submit a journal that includes one-page responses to each week's reading. These responses should include one paragraph relating the book's argument to a contemporary issue in arts management (issues should be drawn from a review of Arts Journal - <http://www.artsjournal.com/> - or other media outlets). Please include a copy of the relevant story with your final journal submission. Journals will be due at the MAM program office in Fairfax by 9 am Tuesday, December 15, 2009.

Electronic devices: Please turn your cell phone ringer off at the beginning of class. As a matter of courtesy to your professor and classmates, cell phones, text and email may only be used during formal breaks in the class session. Class lectures and discussions may be recorded.

However, these recordings are to be played only for your own personal use and may not under any circumstances be reproduced without the express written permission of Dr. Rosenstein. Reproduction or distribution of these materials without permission will be acted upon as a violation of the honor code.

Absence: Please inform Dr. Rosenstein of the reason for any absence. One absence will be excused. Each additional absence will result in one drop in grade (A to A- to B+, etc) for the attendance/participation/discussion portion of your final grade.

Late assignments: Each day that an assignment is late, it will drop one grade (A to A- to B+, etc). Extensions will be given on a case-by-case basis, only at the instructor's discretion, and are not to be discussed with other members of the class or program.

Grading:

Class attendance, participation and discussion of assigned readings: 25%

Journal entries: 25%

10 submissions = A

9 submissions = A-

8 submissions = B+

7 submissions = B

6 submissions = B-

5 submissions or fewer = failing grade

Discussion questions: 25%

10 submissions = A

9 submissions = A-

7 submissions = B

6 submissions = B-

5 submissions or fewer = failing grade

Journal responses: 25%

Once final grades have been recorded, faculty are not to accept any work to change a grade. Grade changes can only be approved when they are due to a calculation or recording error on the part of the faculty.

An incomplete grade (IN) should be used only if the student requests it in writing. An IN counts as a failing grade until completed, and it automatically turns into an F if a grade is not turned in by the deadline in the Schedule of Classes. Some students may prefer a C to an IN, and faculty shouldn't assume that the student wants an IN rather than a grade or that it is in the student's best interest to get an IN.

In addition, faculty may assign an IN only if the student has a very limited amount of work to complete and there is a non academic reason they can't do so within the semester and if, in their best judgment, the student actually stands a good chance of passing the course by finishing the work satisfactorily. Typical situations for giving incompletes involve a final exam (missed due to illness) or a final paper (not completed because of a family emergency). Faculty are not to assign incompletes if the student has missed a substantial portion of the work of the semester and wants extra time to do it; Faculty are not to assign incompletes to give a student time to improve on work already completed.

Faculty are not to agree to give incompletes unless they will be available to grade the work and submit a grade by the official due date. If the faculty will be going on leave or leaving George Mason, this might not be possible. Faculty may set an earlier due date for the unfinished work; it is best to have in writing a description of the work that is outstanding and the date by which it is due. Faculty are not ever obligated to give an IN. [for the purpose of this semester-I do not intend to be elsewhere and therefore will be able to follow through on any IN grade awarded.]

Federal law (a law known as FERPA) requires us to protect the privacy of student information. Faculty should not speak about a student's record with anyone other than the student. The record includes how a student is doing in a course, whether a student has attended class, information about performance or grades, whether a paper has been turned in, etc. This prohibition includes parents, siblings, spouses, anyone. If faculty have questions about whether to respond to an inquiry about a student, please refer them to Linda Miller, Associate Dean, Academic Affairs.

According to the University catalog, all students and faculty are to use their GMU.EDU email address. Some commercial email addresses may be filtered out of the GMU.EDU system. No official information can be sent to students unless on the Mason email system.

Disability: If you are a student with a disability and you need academic accommodations, please see me and contact the Office of Disability Resources at 703.993.2474. All academic accommodations must be arranged through that office. The need for accommodations should be identified at the beginning of the semester and that the specific accommodation has to be arranged through the Office of Disability Resources. Faculty are not to provide accommodations to students on their own (e.g. allowing a student extra time to complete an exam because the student reports having a disability).

The GMU Honor Code: <http://www.gmu.edu/catalog/apolicies/index.html#Anchor12>

Honor Code: To promote a stronger sense of mutual responsibility, respect, trust, and fairness among all members of the George Mason University community and with the desire for greater academic and personal achievement, we, the student members of the university community, have set forth this honor code: Student members of the George Mason University community pledge not to cheat, plagiarize, steal, or lie in matters related to academic work.

GMU student information and resources: <http://www.gmu.edu/mlstudents/>

No grade is important enough to justify cheating, for which there are serious consequences that will follow you for the rest of your life. If you feel unusual pressure about your grade in this or any other course, please talk to me or to a member of the GMU Counseling Center staff.

Using someone else's words or ideas without giving them credit is plagiarism, a very serious Honor Code offense. It is very important to understand how to prevent committing plagiarism when using material from a source. If you wish to quote verbatim, you must use the exact words and punctuation just as the passage appears in the original and must use quotation marks and page numbers in your citation. If you want to paraphrase or summarize ideas from a source, you must put the ideas into your own words, and you must cite the source, using the APA or MLA format. (For assistance with documentation, I recommend Diana Hacker, A Writer's Reference.) The exception to this rule is information termed general knowledge—information that is widely known and stated in a number of sources. Determining what is general knowledge can be complicated, so the wise course is, "When in doubt, cite."

Be especially careful when using the Internet for research. Not all Internet sources are equally reliable; some are just plain wrong. Also, since you can download text, it becomes very easy to inadvertently plagiarize. If you use an Internet source, you must cite the exact URL in your paper and include with it the last date that you successfully accessed the site.

University and Departmental Policies: Each student is responsible for knowing Mason's rules, regulations, requirements, and academic policies. This catalog is the normal repository of policy statements but corrections, changes, or interpretations can be promulgated by other means, including electronic publication. When the university or one of its academic units makes changes in course requirements, grading procedures, or the level of qualitative performance expected of its students for acceptance into particular programs, academic standing, or graduation, the changes apply to all students enrolled at the time of implementation of the change and thereafter.

Official Communication with Students Web: www.gmu.edu/email. Mason uses electronic mail to provide official information to students. Examples include notices from the library, notices about academic standing, financial aid information, class materials, assignments, questions, and faculty feedback. Students are responsible for the content of university communication sent to their Mason e-mail account, and are required to activate that account and check it regularly.

Please sign up for the Mason Alert System by visiting the website <https://alert.gmu.edu>. An emergency poster exists in each classroom explaining what to do in the event of crises and further information about emergency procedures exists on <http://www.gmu.edu/service/cert>.
